advances in communication systems volume 1 ONLINE COVER Though the River Nile supports millions of human livelihoods and holds globally important fish biodiversity, it remains under-protected. No basin-wide spatial conservation planning has been attempted to date. Here, Allan et al. put forward a basin-wide conservation prioritization approach. They compare different cross-boundary collaboration scenarios for achieving biodiversity ...

advances in communication systems volume 1 X10 is a protocol for communication among electronic devices used for home automation (domotics).It primarily uses power line wiring for signaling and control, where the signals involve brief radio frequency bursts representing digital information. A wireless radio based protocol transport is also defined.. X10 was developed in 1975 by Pico Electronics of Glenrothes, Scotland, in order to ...
